QUI TAM COMPLAINT FOR FALSE MARKING

Relator Patent Group, LLC (“Relator”), for its Complaint against Defendant Summit Chemical Company (“Defendant”) alleges as follows:

INTRODUCTION

This is a lawsuit brought under the private attorney general provisions of the patent laws for recovery under Section 292, Title 35, for penalties payable to the United States for falsely marked products as covered by United States Patents with the intent to deceive others. Defendant has advertised its biological mosquito control as patented under patents that are not in force and do not cover the biological mosquito control, with the intent to deceive others and deter them from competing or purchasing competitive products.

A patent monopoly is a powerful exception to the principles of full and fair competition that protect markets, consumers, and competitors upon which the United States economy is based. The patent laws are a complex regulatory scheme, that conflict with antitrust and other laws, which must be balanced to protect the public. As with the antitrust laws, the United States has created a private attorney general system for the detection and enforcement of abuses of parts of the patent laws: Here, Section 292 of the Patents Laws allows a litigant acting as a private attorney general to sue in qui tam for False Marking of a product, with one half of the recovery going to the United States. As a practical matter, the United States has little ability to otherwise police False Marking and must rely on private litigant enforcement.

For simple devices or products, often times patents on specific features are the primary or main bar to new competition. Here Defendant has engaged in a pattern and practice of advertising biological mosquito control with expired patents, in violation of Section 292 of Title 35. Defendant proudly boasts in advertising brochures and product packaging that its biological mosquito control products are “patented” and “unique,” suggesting that the products so marked are not available from others and/or similar products are an infringement of its patents. Yet at least one patent marked on significant products is not in force and is falsely marked in violation of Title 35, Section 292.

THE PARTIES

1. Relator is a limited liability company organized and existing under the laws of the State of Texas.

2. Defendant Summit Chemical Company is a Maryland corporation whose principal office is located at 235 S. Kresson Street, Baltimore, Maryland 21224 and who can be served through its registered agent, Robert K. Briskin, 1259 Berans Road, Owings Mills, MD 21117.

5. Upon information and belief, Defendant could have no reasonable belief that the products identified in U.S. Patent No. 4,631,857 - Expired Patent were properly marked, and the false marking was done with the intent to deceive the public by, including, but not limited to, misusing its patent rights to extend the term of its patents and inhibiting competition.
